The first stage of construction works for the Central Coast Business Park was the substantial renovation of an existing cottage and associated car park at the southern end of the proposed development. By coincidence, the original building was built over 45 years ago as a caretaker's cottage by the father and grandfather of LA's Managing Director. Modern construction techniques and finishes including a complete commercial kitchen and associated cool rooms were added to the project and the makeover has turned the cottage into a modern and stylish café.
